

What's The Problem?

Directions: Read each rule in the first column. Then read the "Breaking the Rule" item in the second column. In the third column, explain why the behavior is a problem.

Rule	Breaking the Rule	Why This Is a Problem
Show up on time, and work assigned hours.	A sales associate leaves his job early because there are not many customers and not much to do.
Follow employer's safety guidelines, and wear required protective clothing and equipment.	A construction worker does not wear her hardhat because it gives her a headache.
Treat co-workers and customers with courtesy and respect.	A customer at a fast food restaurant curses at a cashier, complaining that his food is cold. The cashier responds by insulting the customer.
Work together to solve problems, and let employers know when you need help.	Employees at Roads to Success are working together packing materials that must be delivered to schools in a few days. One employee is confused by the instructions and abandons the project.
